

Abstract

A structural panel that may be suitable for use in building construction, the panel may have a core bonding to first and second skins, the core may be a first foam layer, a 5 membrane, and a second foam layer, the membrane and at least one skin configured to be suitable to retain fasteners, the foam layers having low density, good shear strength and stiffness, the skins and the membrane having higher density and good strength.